Dollar poised for largest weekly gain since April, jobs report in focus

Reuters • 44 minutes ago • Business

Market activity is expected to be subdued ahead of U.S. non-farm payrolls figures - due later in the day - which will help shape the Federal Reserve's outlook for interest rates. Data on Thursday showed the number of Americans filing new applications for unemployment benefits increased marginally last week, with the U.S. labour market gliding at the end of the third quarter. For the payrolls data, economists polled by Reuters expect 140,000 job additions, while the unemployment rate is anticipated to stay steady at 4.2%.
